UTAHNS IN LONDON.

(Special Correspondence.)

London, July 31.—J. Leo Fairbanks of Salt Lake spent this week in London, seeing the sights and visiting friends. He left this evening for Paris, where he will take up the study of art. His present plan is to stay at least two years. At first-he will study sculpture, later turning his attention to historical painting. While in London he spent in the art galleries, and was particularly impressed with the Royal Academy of British Art which, this year, is unusually fine.

Robert L. Anderson of Salt Lake has been transferred from London conference to labor in the European mission headquarters at Liverpool, where he takes the place of Joseph Eckersly of Loa, Wayne county, the latter having been suddenly called home on account of the serious illness of his wife.

George G. Smith and wife of Salt Lake and Alfred Gordon of Willard were among the passengers on the New England, sailing from Liverpool to Boston last week. Jed F. Woolley of Salt Lake, who has been doing missionary work in Germany, sailed at the same time.

Jeffries walked over and examined Corbett's bandages at the suggestion of Fitzsimmons. The two Jims argued good naturedly over the material used, Corbett taking a piece and showing it was soft and pliable. Jeffries nodded assent and walked back to his corner. Corbett removed his bruth robe and disclosed a simple black loin supporter.

Jeffries toook the southeast and Corbett the northwest corner. As they were dourning the gloves they presented a striking contrast of form. Jeffries, big. muscular, stolid and dark as an Indian was a striking contrast with the lithe, trim-built Corbett, with flesh as smooth and firm as Parian marble. Corbett seemed a trifie pale, but self-contained.

Tommy Ryan leaned over the ropes and remarked to a friend that Jeffries was soft as mush and would certainly lose his title.

The men then lined up for a photograph, in fighting attitude.
